Connection Corner: Bridging School to Home

Our first Parent University on Oct. 1 was a great success. Parents learned about how to support the development of executive functioning skills at home. Executive functioning skills are those essential skills needed to help plan, problem solve, manage time, persevere and much more. Check out next week's newsletter for the presentation link and join us on January 7 for our next Parent University.

Tech Tip

Downloading Apps

When it comes to children downloading apps, parents should be cautious and proactive to ensure their safety and privacy. By being cautious and proactive, parents can help ensure their children's safety and privacy while using apps and devices. Here are some tips:

1. Set App Store Permissions: Enable parental controls on devices to restrict app downloads. You can set up Family Sharing on iOS devices or enable parental controls on Android devices through Google Play.

2. Research Apps: Before allowing your child to download an app, research it thoroughly. Check reviews, ratings, and the app's content to ensure it's appropriate for your child's age.

To Review apps: <https://www.common sense media.org/app-reviews>

3. Check Permissions: Review the permissions requested by the app. Be cautious of apps that request access to a lot of personal information or features that are not relevant to the app's function.

4. Use Kid-Friendly App Stores: Consider using kid-friendly app stores like Amazon Kids, Google Play Kids, or Apple's App Store for Kids, which offer a curated selection of age-appropriate apps.

5. Teach Digital Literacy: Educate your children about the risks of downloading apps from unknown sources and the importance of not sharing personal information online.

6. Set App Guidelines: Establish clear rules and guidelines for downloading apps. Encourage your children to ask for permission before downloading any new apps.

7. Monitor App Usage: Regularly check the apps your child has downloaded and their usage. Make sure they are not accessing inappropriate content or spending too much time on certain apps.
